"Catholicity, exclusively prevailing in Europe, abolished Slavery among the European races; she introduced the principle of the abolition of Slavery into European civilization, by showing practically and in opposition to the cessary to society; and she made it understood that the sacred work of enfranchisement was the foundation of all great and life-giving civilization. She has, therefore, inoculated European civilization with the principle of the abolition of Slavery; it is owing to her that, wherever this civilization has come into contact with Slavery, it has been profoundly disturbed-an evident proof that there were at the bottom two opposite elements, two contending principles, which were compelled to struggle incessantly. until the more powerful, noble, and fruitful prevailing, and reducing the other under the yoke, in the end annihilated it."
